V 次の英文を読んで、後の設問に答えなさい。

There are many famous stuffed* bears, but the two most famous are probably Winnie-the-Pooh and Paddington Bear. Pooh first appeared in a London newspaper on Christmas Eve in 1925. Paddington Bear first appeared in a children's picture book in 1958. He became so popular that a Paddington Bear stuffed toy was the first item to pass through the Channel Tunnel connecting England and France in 1994. When it comes to stuffed animals, bears are certainly the most popular. But what is the origin of stuffed bear toys and the name “teddy bear”?

The “teddy bear” is named after the former United States President Theodore Roosevelt, who was called “Teddy.” Roosevelt loved the outdoors and often went hunting. On one bear hunting trip in November 1902, most of Roosevelt's friends had already killed an animal, but Roosevelt had not. His friends captured a bear alive and told Roosevelt to shoot it. Roosevelt said that would be “unsportsmanlike,” and refused to shoot it. Later that month, a newspaper printed a political cartoon about the incident. In the cartoon, Roosevelt looked unhappy and refused to shoot a cute baby bear.

Soon after that, an American toy company began making stuffed bear toys. The American company called them “Teddy's bear” after Roosevelt. Around the same time, a German company had already been making other stuffed animals. They started making stuffed bears around the same time that Roosevelt's story became popular. The German company claims that it made the world's first teddy bear after hearing about the political cartoon. Probably, the American and German companies created stuffed bears at the same time.
